Attempted Murder and Suicide

Farm Home South Ribstone Is Scene of Fatal Shooting

VICTIM FIGHTING FOR LIFE IN PROVOST HOSPITAL

WILL HOLD AN INQUEST ON DEAD ASSAILANT

At five a.m. on Monday, John W. Peterson, who resides with his father and married brother on their farm a few miles south of Ribstone, while going to the barn to commence the daily chores, was shot in the back by a high-powered .22 rifle in the hands of a man named Hearn, who had been employed on the farm some two miles distant. There were no eye witnesses of the tragedy, but it is presumed that as the first shooting did not stop the victim, his assailant fired again, this time the bullet striking Peterson in the neck and rendering him unconscious.

The attacker must then have picked up the body from the ground and carrying it to a nearby place, threw it over the side of the enclosure. He then immediately went to the Peterson barn and fired a bullet into his own head near the right eye, the body being found in one of the horse stalls. Hearing the shooting, Ernest Peterson, the brother, rushed from the house and found Hearn in the barn. After a short search he also found his brother lying in the place.

BLAIRMORE EDITOR JOINS BENEDICTS

WELL-KNOWN PUBLISHER TAKES CALGARY BRIDE

Cupid shot at a newspaperman of Blairmore and scored a bullseye. W. J. Bartlett, the "long-time" editor of the Blairmore Enterprise, reached Blairmore from Calgary late on Sunday night in company with a June bride. The well-known editor of the Enterprise left Blairmore on Thursday night on a secret mission, but information from Calgary states that Mr. Bartlett and Mrs. Lowe of Calgary, were married on Friday night in Calgary.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. T. Young of Trinity church, East Calgary. Owing to the fact that the owner of the Blairmore Enterprise stands six feet seven and a half inches in his stocky feet, rumor says that the trip to Calgary was necessary in order to have special furniture manufactured for the new home which will be in the southwest district of Blairmore, near the athletic park. The Blairmore Herald.

While extending to our brother editor our very best felicitations we rise to remark, "It truly is remarkable the awful risks these country newspaper men will take. But they always come up smiling!"

Born in Pakenham, Ontario, Mr. Johnston came to Calgary seven years ago from Wainwright, where he had farmed for several years. He is survived by two brothers and one sister, Adam, of Saskatoon, William of Wainwright, and Mrs. C. Coleman—Calgary Herald.

The late Mr. Johnston will be well remembered by a large number of our readers, and sympathies will go out to his only sister Mrs. Coleman of town, who has been bereaved in the loss of another brother within the past two months.

CAN. NATIONAL RLWYS. WEEKLY NEWS ITEMS

Close co-operation was effected between the Canadian National Railways and the Manitoba Provincial Department of Agriculture in waging a concerted fight for the control and eradication of grasshoppers. Along various subdivisions, the railway right-of-way has received applications of poison bait, Sod, such as is found along railway right-of-ways is especially liked by grasshoppers when depositing eggs. As fifty per cent of poison bait is filled and as saw-dust makes an excellent filler and holder for the arsenic solution, the Canadian National has given special service on the movement of carloads of saw-dust from points at which saw mills are located to districts where mixing stations for poison bait are located.

The Canadian National Railways are operating a number of special party movements both from the East and from the West, during June. Among these are: George E. Martineau Rotary party, Boston, which arrived in the west last Sunday, en route to Vancouver; National Education Association party, San Francisco, next week, from Vancouver bound for Niagara Falls; Judy Barnes and Elwood Tours Club, Elwood, Indiana, special train, arriving towards the end of the month at Vancouver; 34th District Rotary party, Philadelphia, arriving June 30, via Duluth, en route to Vancouver. A party of Winnipeg naval reservists, of approximately 30 members, with Petty Officer J. Ball in charge, moved last week on the Continental Limited for Victoria.

Canada's Far North holds irresistible attractions for Madame Guyot de Mishaegen and the Baroness Boffin, both of Antwerp, Belgium. They travelled by Canadian National Railways, en route to Saint John, whence they proceeded to Lake Mistassini to commence an arduous expedition of three months, primarily as sportswomen, partly as scientists and partly in the interests of cinematography. From Mistassini, the two Belgian women will travel by canoe to Rupert House, on Hudson Bay, via the rivers A la Poudre and Rupert. Hudson Bay officials say this is one of the most precarious routes of the North country. Madame Mishaegen has visited Northern Canada before. In fact her collection of trophies taken in Canada lacks only a bear skin. This shortage she plans to remedy shortly. A ticket from The Pas to Saint John has been forwarded to the trusty Indian guide who aided the Belgian woman in her former exploits, so that he may lead the way this summer.

Noticing the announcement that two ships would be available for inbound cargoes to Churchill this summer, one from Antwerp and the other from Liverpool, the Saskatchewan King's Printer wrote to a Birmingham firm, suggesting that the new route be used for a shipment consisting of a stationery purchased from the English firm of Suttin and Durrant, of Birmingham. While it will only be a small shipment, and will not go far in making up a cargo for an ocean freighter, it will add one more customer for the test, and will give the government first-hand information on the time required and the cost.

At last there is the perfect fish story according to the classic definition of what constitutes news, a fish bites a man. It happened on one of the trout pools in Yarmouth County, Nova Scotia, near Kempsville, according to the Fish and Game Department of the Canadian National Railways. While fishing in one of the numerous trout pools throughout a fisherman got a bite from a very large trout. After playing it for some time, the trout appeared about to surrender and not having a landing net handy, the fisherman attempted to use his hands, putting one of his thumbs in the trout's mouth and a finger back of the gills. The trout, promptly bit the thumb and managed to work itself clear and with a final flick of its tail escape back into the water.

"TAILOR MADE MAN" AT ELITE THIS WEEK END

Big business mixes with love; an adventurous American youth mixes both and like Don Quixote, battles windmills in a whirl of mirth in William Haines' new comedy romance, "A Tailor Made Man." The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture will come to the Elite theatre this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

This has been called the ultra-modern in pictures, as far as America is concerned. It includes a remedy for present business troubles in a household imbroglio wedged into a collection of hilarious laughing situations. It depicts a delicate love story and a very dramatic adventure of a youth who applies the good old American grit to a bad situation. In this characterization, Haines in his own inimitable way embodies the spirit of the man who rises from poverty and obscurity to fame and financial success. He starts out as an innocent little pants presser but ends up as a wolf of the commercial world. Information is Haines abandons smart-cracking to a considerable extent to give a very earnest and serious performance—though he manages to get in as many laughs as he usually does. The picture is based on the play of the same name which enjoyed a long run at the Cohan & Harris Theatre, New York, in 1917.

Dorothy Jordan who scored as the waterfront wait of "Min and Bill," has the leading feminine role. Others appearing in the cast are Joseph Castor, the well-known stage actor; Marjorie Rambeau, last seen in "Inspiration"; William Austin; Ian Keith; Hedda Hopper and many others.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editors Note: We accept no responsibility whatsoever for views expressed under this heading.

The Editor:

Dear Sir—May I, through the medium of your paper, draw the attention of the farmers and stockmen of this district to the new rates on cattle and hogs which became effective on June 15th over the Canadian National Railways. Hitherto, the minimum weight of a car of cattle was 30,000 and hogs and sheep 10,000 lbs. Under the new rates, it is possible to ship cattle at a slightly higher rate with a minimum of 12,000 and another set of rates subject to a minimum of 6,000. On hogs and sheep the new rates are subject to a minimum of 11,000 and 6,000 respectively. There is also a privilege of a stop-off for completion of loading in transit at a charge of $3.00. The above new rates apply only on shipment of livestock to market centres from stations within 200 miles from such points; it does not apply on Winnipeg or Saskatoon. It is unquestionably true that stock moving by rail arrives at the market in better condition than if handled by truck, and therefore commands a better price. Whilst on the subject of freight rates, may I point out to the shipping public in general certain factors which are not sufficiently well known. The application of two hauls over different railways of about the same mileage are invariably much higher than a long haul on one line and a short haul on the other. On shipments moving from the east via lake and rail usually take longer to reach their destination, and with the inclusion of handling charges at the head of the lakes do not as a rule affect any saving. Should the shipment amount to several hundred pounds then a saving can be made. There is one other point which I would like to emphasize and that is the importance of including a small shipment from one manufacturer or wholesaler to another and doing away with the minimum charge and permitting the straight class rate at per 100 lbs. to operate. Shippers or importers should be aware of the fact that when they pay the transportation charges they have the right to determine over what route the shipment shall move and bill of lading should be drawn accordingly. During the writer's experience in connection with freight rates I have so often seen where shippers could reduce their charges when importing different commodities had they previously consulted someone whose knowledge of the application of freight rates would effect considerable saving in the charges for transportation. As a servant of the public the writer's time is available to shippers at all office hours, so why not make the necessary enquiries first and if the desired rates are not on file here the same will be obtained by wire and rates quoted.

Yours truly,

GEO. HARPER

C.N.R. Local Office.

CAR LICENSES REDUCED $5.00

Car licenses will be reduced $5.00 dating from June 15th. The new rate applies to the balance of this year only. A half-price reduction goes into effect on August 1st.

DEPUTY MINISTER SUGGESTS DIVISION

MR. ROBERT ENGLISH SAYS PROVINCE AT PRESENT IS OVERGOVERNED

A tremendous saving in administration expenses was forecast by Robert English, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, if a scheme of government advanced by him were adopted. Mr. English suggested the division of the province into thirty-nine sections, each of these sections electing one council, one school board and one member of the legislature.

We are over-governed in the west pointed out Mr. English and by the means suggested it would be possible to cut down tremendously on the cost of government. At present in Alberta there are 166 municipal districts. If thought is given to the matter, it will be readily seen what a tremendous saving would be effected, should the number of districts be decreased.

A step ahead, said the speaker was the placing of the collection of taxes in the hands of the municipal district, but he went on to predict, further consolidation along the lines suggested by him would occur within the next two or three years.

Mr. English went on to point out that municipal affairs in Alberta were not in a particularly serious condition. The bonded debt of the municipal district is ten times lower than is the bonded debt of municipalities in Saskatchewan. Towns and villages in the same province are reducing their bonded debt and have been reducing it ever since 1923.

Our progress from now rests with the results of the Imperial Conference said Mr. English. If the right steps are taken along the lines of Imperial exchange of commodities, it will mean renewed prosperity among the Empire nations.

After all, said Mr. English in conclusion, one big contributory cause of the depression is in our distrust of other men, which leads to lack of credit. If we could persuade ourselves that our fellow man is going to do the right thing, we would find that the depression would soon end.

Some fish can travel faster than an express train, estimates show arrears of taxes against 393 lands be tabled.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Brown—that cheque No. 255, in favour of Nels Johnston, for $7.50, be ordered cancelled, and that another one for the same amount be drawn out in the name of Donald Swanson.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Wahlstrom—that the Secretary communicate with the Department and find out if it would be permissible to pass a By-Law whereby a rebate of 5 per cent would be allowed on all taxes paid between certain dates.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Wahlstrom—that the Secretary be instructed to procure two sprayers for weed purposes and that the Weed Inspectors, when possible have ratepayers return same to the Municipal Office.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Ker—that resolution dealing with the salary of Weed Inspectors, under date of May 31st, be amended to read at the rate of $3.50 per day.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Ker—that the matter dealing with the Medical Areas, be tabled until next meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Ker—that vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. G. Lundwater, for coming to this meeting and advising the Council in detail as to how the scheme is working in the Municipal District of Huskisson.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. Jackson—that this be received and filed.—Carried.

WESTERN CATTLE SHIPPED CHEAPER

FREIGHT RATE REDUCTION IS EXTENDED TILL END OF AUGUST

The 50% reduction in the freight rate on western cattle shipped from Ontario and Quebec feeding points to Montreal for export, a concession granted by the Canadian National Railways last autumn, has been extended to August 31. The reduction applies only on Western cattle re-shipped from Ontario and Quebec points to Montreal, on through bills of lading. The shipments are forwarded at the regular export rate and the 50% reduction is by way of rebate on application of the owner, who must be a bona fide farmer. The concession is an effort by the railways to co-operate with the livestock industry to stimulate shipping of western cattle in eastern fed lots. Inward-paid expense bills covering shipments from Western Canada to eastern feed lots must in all cases be attached to claims for rebate.

MADCAP

"I've been thinking that you ought to get away for a little vacation." I was Lucile Britton who greeted "Brick" Taggart's remark with low ironic laughter. Taggart's heavy-featured face retained an inscrutable look, and his pale, greenish-blue eyes held fast their gaze upon Eddie Britton. Only the cigar in the corner of Taggart's mouth gave a hint of the fat man's earnestness. Whenever the cigar bobbed and shifted about, it was easy to see that Brick Taggart was intent on some matter of utmost importance.

Britton's laughter died swiftly, for, when Brick Taggart was serious, it did not become any of his henchmen to laugh. In his own sphere, Brick Taggart was a king; to those in his favor, he was a benevolent despot, and to others outside the pale, a merciless dictator. Taggart was a big shot in the underworld, a man who could dispense any punishment with the slightest nod.

"Why the laugh?" said Taggart. "Because," answered Eddie Britton, "there's about as much chance of me taking a vacation as for you to take a trip to stir. I'm broke."

"As usual," added Taggart. "But just the same, I've got a little vacation all planned out for you. And doing the planning, I expect to foot the bills."

"And not for my health," put in Eddie grinning. "Go on. Let's hear what's on your mind."

"Just this," answered Taggart as he hauled a railroad ticket together with an envelope from his pocket. "Here's your transportation and here is your references and record."

"References? Record?" "Just so," continued Brick Taggart. "You're taking the ten o'clock train tomorrow morning for the high town of Bergenville. From there, you get transportation out about five miles to a place called Gray Gate Farm."

Taggart paused, evidently waiting some word from Eddie Britton. It was plain that he believed the name of Gray Gate Farm would carry some special significance to Eddie.

The latter however shook his head almost stupidly. As far as he was concerned, Taggart was still speaking in riddles.

"It doesn't register, eh?" Taggart asked. "For a young fellow with your inclinations, I am surprised. Why, anybody at all that reads the Sunday supplements ought to know that Gray Gate Farm. It's the great J. Q. Ainsworth's place."

Softly Eddie Britton whistled, an expression of awed surprise far more eloquent than more words could have been.

"Yes, sir," intoned Taggart. "This trip I'm stepping out for real big game. And you're the fellow I need to start the ball rolling."

"What have my inclinations got to do with it?" replied Taggart. "You have been places and seen things that don't exist for most of my boys except in the movies. By the grace of fate, you were once able to carry a football a little faster than most hads could move without one. Also you were able to toss and catch forward passes and kick the ball and raise general destruction with your opposition. And so some old grads got together and saw that you had a chance to go to college."

Eddie Britton raised voice and hand in weary protest. It always hurt him to think how he had tossed his luck away. "What's all that got to do with whatever job you're framing at this J. Q. Ainsworth's farm?"

"J. Q. Ainsworth wants a man out there to be sort of a guard and watchman, and, in between times, you'll do some car driving to help out the regular chauffeur."

"How do you know all this?" Taggart's laughter preceded his answer. There were times when Brick, hard-boiled as he was, loved to mystify his subordinates. "Knowing things is my business, Eddie."

"Yes, but—"

"Well, just to satisfy you, I'll explain. As you know, there's a good many business men that come in for protection to me. One of them happens to run an employment agency. And so you can see how easy it was for me to get you placed for a job at J. Q. Ainsworth's place when a vacancy came along."

"And what kind of a job do you intend to pull?"

"What's it to you?" snapped Brick Taggart. "All you do is to get out there to-morrow and keep your eyes and ears open. I want you to get every scrap of information you can about the place and the people. Maybe you've heard something about the jewelry the Ainsworths got?"

Eddie Britton nodded dubiously. "And a pretty mess I'll be in if you get away with that sort of stuff. Those insurance dicks make a business of catching people when a flock of real diamonds get away."

"Of course," sighed Taggart. "If you don't want to do what I say—"

He paused, and the smile on his big mouth was a malignant mockery of mirth. "Just say you aren't with me—and see what happens."

Eddie Britton understood afresh the power of Taggart. Another man would have come blunty out with his threat. Not so Taggart. Brick was too wise and smooth for anything too concrete. Brick Taggart left his threat hanging in the air, and it achieved thereby a doubly sinister power. If a man came right out and said he would frame you, or have you sent to stir or stand you on the spot, a fellow would not, could not, feel half the fear which this vague, almost careless talk aroused.

"Who said I was quitting?" Eddie Britton hastened to ask. "And for that matter, I can see where it would help for you to use me. People like the Ainsworths wouldn't be exactly easy to employ a fellow like Tiger Kluge with a max like a bad dream. And they wouldn't be apt to keep Runt McKay on the job very long with him making grammar look like one of the lost arts."

Brick Taggart was once more beaming agreeably. "And there's no other advantage you've got over the other boys. You haven't any police record. You stayed in college a year and a half. You learned to talk and act right when you set your mind to it. You ought to suit the Ainsworths like a bull market suits a margin player. You'll go over big. They'll think their new man Britton is just about right."

"Britton?" gasped Eddie. "I'm not going there under my own name, am I?"

"You sure are," Taggart assured him. "Fact is you're going there as yourself. If any one takes the trouble to read your history and references in this envelope here, they'll know all about the fact that you might have been one of the all-time All American half backs only for the fact—"

"That I flunked out of college after my first varsity season," interposed Eddie in a tone tinged with regret.

Taggart chuckled knowingly. "According to the employment agency's letter, you quit to go to work. Sound better."

"There's plenty in my life that could be better," observed Eddie. "Where I was a fool was in throwing away a real chance. If I had used my head I might have been—"

"As the poet says," interjected Taggart, "those are sad, sad words. First thing you know you'll be in tears."

Eddie Britton eyed Taggart stonily. "Just the same, I was a fool. Instead of grabbing my chances and going up, I threw them away and I've been steadily going down. I'm nothing but a cheap crook, and I'll wind up the same way as every other small-time criminal—either in stir or with a bullet through my ribs."

"The trouble with you is," commented Taggart, "that you're broke. Wait'll I hand you your split on this Ainsworth job and you'll be all cheered up. In a couple of weeks, you'll be sitting pretty. You can hit the high spots then to make up for this vacation in the sticks."

"A swell vacation," grumbled Eddie Britton. "I remember when I was in on house parties and all that how the hell were treated. They'll call me Britton and maybe 'my man' and give me enough work to kill a horse. And most of the time, they'll treat me as if I was some part of the scenery. There's nothing human about any one that works for people like the Ainsworths."

"Well, at any rate, it's the ten-o'clock train for you to-morrow morning. And when you get the chance you're to post me on the comings and goings of the Ainsworths. Just phone me here. And keep your eyes and ears open and your mouth shut. Get me?"

"I get you," answered Eddie with a colorless lack of enthusiasm. "It's me for the sticks and to be ordered about until you're ready to spring the big jewel robbery."

"For which," concluded Taggart as Eddie paused at the door, "you will be blame well paid. So run along Eddie, and take a last, long look at the big town. And don't be missing that train to-morrow."

It was noon the following day when Eddie Britton stepped down from the Bergenville to Torrytown bus. He was facing the imposing gates of J. Q. Ainsworth's Gray Gate Farm.

"Farm," he mused as he hesitated at the half-open barricade. "If this is a farm, then I'm a Japanese beetle."

This remark had been addressed to his own ears. Therefore Eddie was startled when he heard a voice obviously taking up his challenge of authenticity of the place's title.

"You're a bug of some kind, mister. Because this is a farm and a half."

He looked toward the direction whence the feminine voice had come, to see a girl attired in the black and white of a service uniform. She was in a recess in the face of one of the massive stone gate towers, peering out now and laughing at his surprise.

"You might as well kill a fellow as to frighten him to death."

She laughed, and, as her eyes lighted up, Eddie revised his opinion of her looks. She wasn't merely good looking. She was absolutely a knockout.

"You're the new handy man, aren't you?"

Eddie nodded. "Edward Britton. Miss Julia told me to be looking for you. Said her father had hired a new man. And I'm just a little glad you showed up. This place was sort of lonesome and spooky last night. After Miss Julia cleared out the house was like a tomb."

Eddie had progressed far enough now to see the large gray house looming through the trees. "Some tomb," he observed. Then he peered sharply over at the girl. "How does it happen you're all alone here? There ought to be an army of help in a place like this."

"Just one of Miss Julia's capers," answered the girl as she emerged from her recessed hiding place. "You see, she was the only one of the family at home, and she decided she was going to disappear for a week herself and so she told all the help to clear out."

"And left you here all alone?" "As a committee of one to take your references and tell you to stand guard over the place."

"Kind of tough on you," observed Eddie. "All the rest gone and you having to stick around."

The girl laughed again. "I'll get my vacation later. And, meanwhile, if old J. Q. Ainsworth shows up here to find Miss Julia has let all the help go, it will be worth a week's vacation just to hear him rave."

Eddie Britton had been thinking rapidly. It was quite evident that Miss Julia Ainsworth was a person given to swift and ill-considered actions. Also it was clear that, for the purposes of robbery, the circumstances would be mighty favorable for at least a week—always provided, of course, that Miss Julia had left some of the famous Ainsworth jewelry flung carelessly about the premises.

"I guess," commented Eddie thoughtfully, "that your mistress is rather a flighty sort of person."

The girl walking beside him agreed heartily. "Flighty isn't strong enough. All her life, she's been doing unexpected things. Has her father, old J. Q. Ainsworth, out of his mind trying to keep track of her, I suppose, when you have everything and have always had everything you want you get bored after a while."

Eddie smiled thoughtfully. "Probably needs a good old-fashioned spanking. Imagine her leaving one girl all alone in a place like this. He paused and then asked abruptly: "What about telling me who you are?"

"Me? I'm Anita. Personal maid to Miss Julia. She's a good one to work for. Lots of time to yourself. Forever going off to go places and do things, she is."

That same evening, Eddie sneaked away long enough to phone Taggart in the city. As he explained the situation he had encountered, he could hear grumbling, half-hushed profanity coming in surprised little spurts from Brick Taggart.

"And I thought you'd be pleased. I was figuring that to-morrow, when this girl Anita is busy, I could prow the house and locate the wall safes and what jewelry was about."

"You leave the thinking to me," came Taggart's snarling answer. "But one thing sure—as soon as Miss Julia shows up again, you get to the gas station where you're phoning from and let me know. You got that straight?"

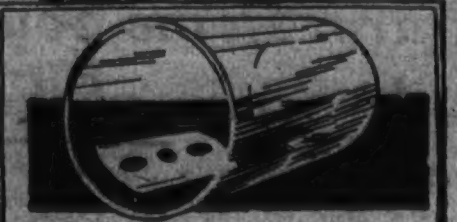

"Sure," answered Eddie. However, when he was almost back to the house he was still puzzling over Taggart's attitude. It was queer that Brick went into a huff because circumstances were such that there were scarcely any real obstacles to a robbery of Gray Gate Farm. Why, two or three live crooks could move anything but the house itself in the next week!

PUBLIC PREFERENCE IS THE BEST PROOF OF VALUE

More people are buying CHEVROLET SIXES than ANY other car

because Chevrolet gives more

The new Chevrolet became Canada's largest selling automobile because it offered the public outstanding value in a low priced car. Today, Chevrolet is maintaining its lead in sales—because, with prices reduced and quality unchanged, Chevrolet has increased its lead in value. For the first four months of 1932, Chevrolet has outsold the next leading car more than two-to-one.

Drive a Chevrolet—how much more it offers than you can find elsewhere in the lowest price field. Smarter styling—Chevrolet emulates the modern lines and modish fittings of expensive custom cars. Finer coachwork—for Chevrolet, alone in its field, has bodies by Fisher, with their lasting, quiet hardwood-and-steel construction. More advanced features—because of Chevrolet's Free Wheeling, silent Synchro-Mesh gear shifting and many other up-to-date advantages. A more economical engine—because with its built-in smoothness, its speed and acceleration, the Chevrolet six-cylinder power plant costs less to operate than any other automobile engine of comparable size and power. A more thoroughly proved product—because no other 1932 motor car is backed by the satisfactory road-experience of so many thousands of owners.

A Greater Value than Ever—because you can enjoy all these advantages today in any of thirteen big, quality models—at reduced prices—and on small payments spread over a period of months.

ACID STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior tooth-paste that safeguards against acid-mouth. (Made in Canada.)

You Are A Very Disobedient Person

DO YOU PROTEST, AND SAY THAT YOU'RE NOT A VERY DISOBEDIENT PERSON? BE PATIENT, FOR A MOMENT, AND WE SHALL SEE.

LOOK AT THE ADVERTISEMENTS WHICH YOU SEE IN THIS NEWSPAPER, AND IN OTHER NEWSPAPERS. MOST OF THEM BID YOU DO SOMETHING—SOMETHING WHICH, IF DONE, WOULD BE ADVANTAGEOUS TO YOU, AS WELL AS BEING PROFITABLE TO THE ADVERTISER. BUT DO YOU ALWAYS OBEY THESE ADVERTISERS? YOU DO NOT! AND WHAT IS YOUR EXCUSE?

Take your teeth, by way of example? Are you doing what you can to prevent or delay their decay and loss? If you are like most persons you are not. Yet you are being urged by advertisements to use regularly a product which, if used regularly, would keep your mouth and teeth in a really good health condition; and would enable you to keep your teeth sound, and keep away toothache.

It isn't the price of the product which keeps you from using it—it's just plain inertia and procrastination.

Then there's an electric or other kind of washer—this by way of example—able to be purchased on the instalment plan. The advertisements bid you buy it, and give you good reasons why you should use this labor-saving, life-prolonging mechanism.

Has every man and every woman known to you obeyed the commands of the advertisements of this washer? They have not. And their resistance cannot be put down to disbelief. The explanation is: Most of us are shameless procrastinators—putting off, putting off, putting off all the time.

WHEN YOU READ ADVERTISEMENTS, SEE IN THEM THE UNTIRING EFFORT OF MANUFACTURERS AND INSTITUTIONS TO CAUSE YOU TO DO RIGHT THINGS.

TAKE THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES, BY WAY OF EXAMPLE: THEIR ADVERTISEMENTS URGE ALL OF US TO INSURE OUR LIVES. YET HOW STUBBORN MOST OF US ARE! WE RESIST THE BIDDINGS OF THE ADVERTISEMENTS AND THE CANVASSERS OF THE SALESMEN OF LIFE INSURANCE. WE DEFER DOING THE OBVIOUSLY RIGHT THING, OFTEN FOR YEARS!

SO WHEN YOU SEE AND READ ADVERTISEMENTS, AND WHEN YOU FEEL INCLINED TO SAY, "WHAT A SHOCKING LOT OF MONEY IS SPENT BY ADVERTISERS!" REFLECT ON THIS IDEA: IT IS STUBBORN DISOBEDIENCE OF MEN AND WOMEN THAT IS TO BE CONDEMNED.

WE SHOULD BE GRATEFUL TO THOSE ADVERTISERS WHO PURSUE US ALL OUR LIFE, BIDDING US DO THINGS, WHICH IF DONE, WOULD BE ADVANTAGEOUS TO US.

CONSOLIDATING PLAN FOR MUNICIPALITIES

Abolition of the present system of small municipal districts in the province, and the creation in its place of a system of "enlarged municipal areas" under which 166 municipal districts now in operation together with some 143 improvement districts now administered by the provincial government, would be amalgamated into some 40 "enlarged" areas, thereby eliminating a large part of the cost of government both provincial and municipal, while increasing efficiency of administration, is proposed in a plan announced this week by Premier J. E. Brownlee. A saving in municipal administrative costs alone of over one-quarter million dollars or three-quarters of a mill on the total rural assessment in the province is estimated, while the saving in provincial administrative costs and in the costs of all public services will run into very large figures.

The proposal, which has already been before the provincial cabinet, and is now presented to the public by the Premier, is the result of two years of rather exhaustive study and survey of the province conducted by an official of the Department of Municipal Affairs. The plan is entirely different from any scheme of large municipal organizations in existence in Canada, or the United States, and is simply the application of the principles of our present small municipal unit to the larger area and continues the existing idea of only one authority for municipal administrative and taxing purposes.

The plan as so far developed will, in accordance with a resolution of the last convention of the municipal districts association, be discussed further with the executive of that organization who have already been in consultation with the departmental officials in its preparation. It will then be submitted to the next convention of that association after which it is hoped it will be ready for submission to the next session of the provincial legislature. As a basis for discussion only, a map has been prepared setting out a plan of consolidation which appears reasonable and equitable to the departmental officials, but this map will, of course be subject to adjustment, both as to the number of large units and their boundaries, as a result of further discussion. The new districts would be set up in accordance with certain fundamental principles, more or less as follows:

Grouping of localities having a common interest, and being of the same general agricultural and geographical classification, as far as possible.

Maintenance of the municipal boundaries along township and range lines save where natural boundaries such as rivers might more advantageously be used.

Existence of sufficient population and assessable property so that each unit could function economically.

Consideration of the accessibility of the administrative centre.

Government of the units would be much the same as the government of the present municipal districts. There would be a council of six or eight elected from six or eight wards or electoral divisions established in the enlarged municipal area, with the possible chance of having the reeve or chairman of council elected at large, rather than by appointment from the membership of the council as at present.

Premier Brownlee, in discussing the new plan, points out that the development is a logical one, in view not only of the urgent necessity for reducing the general cost of government wherever possible, but also in view of the fact that with the vastly improved facilities of transportation and communication of the present day, enlarged areas are in reality more easily administered than the present system was created.

One of the great benefits of the scheme would be the large economy in the cost of administration, both provincial and municipal, already referred to.

Other advantages of the plan would be:

A greater equalization of the tax burden.

A more uniform and more equitable assessment of the lands in the area, since the judgment of the assessor would be applied over a very much larger area.

More uniform school levies and a saving in the administrative costs of education.

A more co-ordinated system of roadbuilding, the enlargement of the municipal areas making it possible to bring the roads into alignment with those of other districts and with the general provincial highway plan.

The plan, if adopted, would present, also, the opportunity for a review of the whole field of taxation as between the municipalities and the government. The possibility is suggested that the provincial government would abandon the field of real property taxation, leaving that to the jurisdiction of municipal councils, urban as well as rural.

THE HOME GARDEN

CANADIAN GARDEN SERVICE

FOR 1932

NOT TOO LATE TO START

If for some reason or other no garden has been started yet it is not too late to put in many flowers and vegetables. Of course, if possible, use started plants instead of seed with those long season things like tomatoes, cabbage, egg plants, celery and cauliflower among the vegetables and Zinnias, Cosmos, Petunias, Marigolds and a host of other flowers. Then too, it is advisable to use any short cuts within reach, like plenty of commercial fertilizer, and water and cultivation. With later vegetables like corn, beans and melons, this is very little behind schedule and there is no reason why three sowings about a week apart cannot be made. This continuous planting will spread the harvesting season just that much farther. Instead of depending upon leaf lettuce, ordinary radishes and spinach which are among the first crops sown and harvested it would be better to plant Cos lettuce, a self bleaching hot weather sort, which, if planted several times at ten days interval will keep coming up all summer. Instead of the spring radish the summer sort should be planted and Swiss Chard in the place of spinach. The latter vegetable will produce a summer supply of greens, the leaves being used while the stem may be cooked and prepared like asparagus. Lima beans and Chinese cabbage are regularly planted in June.

Watch for Pests

Many a beautiful flower garden and a highly satisfactory stand of vegetables has been partially or totally destroyed by attacks of insect and fungus pests which might easily have been controlled. Roughly speaking, the insect enemies are divided into two groups, those that eat holes in the foliage and those that suck out the juices. For the first-named, poison is usually applied, while the suckers are attacked with a burning spray that penetrates their hidden. Often when both are present, a combination of poison and something that burns, such as lime sulphur and arsenate, give the best results. The damage from the biting insects is usually quite apparent, but the presence of the other kind is only shown at first by a withering or withering of the foliage. For sucking pests, chief of which are the aphids or plant lice spray with whale oil soap, a quarter pound of soap to a gallon and a half of water; nicotine sulphate, or "Black Leaf 40" or any other repellent secured from a reliable seed store. Cold water from a fine nozzle under high pressure, will sometimes wash off the pests. When fungus attacks the plants, the foliage usually turns yellow or brown, or white spots like mildew cover the leaves. Fungus is usually most common in warm, murky weather. Spraying with Bordeaux Mixture, or dusting with specially finely ground sulphur is advised. Sulphur dust will also protect hollyhocks and phlox from rust, if applied when the disease first shows itself. An ordinary tin can with the top perforated like a salt shaker makes a good duster. For flowers, it is well to add a dry poison such as arsenate of lead, or tobacco dust to the sulphur, so that insects will also be controlled. For eating insects, one may spray with paris green, arsenate of lead, hellebore, or some of the many patent poisonous preparations.

Trimming

Even annual flowers will benefit from a little judicious trimming or pruning now and then. Many plants like the dahlias and zinnias set a great quantity of buds and if all of these are allowed to develop, the flowers will not be very large. Some people make a practice of removing nearly all the buds so as to have giant blooms. Moving the top of the main stem and the first buds will encourage side growth. Another thing to remember at this time is to remove all signs of fading bloom. Once the flower has passed its best, pick it off, or if the stems are short and the bloom numerous like alyssum or phlox, shear it off. Otherwise seed pods will start to develop and when this stage is reached the plant will stop flowering altogether.

Cultivation

With the bulk of planting over, cultivation is the big job in the garden now. The objects are threefold, first and probably least important to keep down weeds, second, to improve the physical or mechanical condition of the soil by letting in air and breaking down lumps and thirdly, the most important of all, to conserve moisture during dry weather. Neither vegetables or flowers will do well if they receive a check in growth through lack of moisture. In seasons of prolonged drought, of course, it is impossible to prevent a setback unless one is fortunate enough to have a supply of water, but cultivation will help a lot as it prevents evaporation by creating a dust mulch on the surface of the soil. Using a special paper, now being generally distributed, or vegetable refuse like grass clippings, bean and pea pods, carrot tops, etc., also helps to conserve moisture. The application of commercial fertilizer is another factor in fighting dry weather as this tends to keep growth going.

Three modern descendants of the Gentlemen Adventurers went into the mountains last week and did not return empty-handed. They were Ralph Parsons, Fur Trade Commissioner, H. P. Warner, Manager of Fur Purchasing Agencies, both of Winnipeg, and J. D. J. Forbes, fur sales manager, of London, England, all officers of the Hudson's Bay Company. After a day's fishing in the newly opened waters of Medicine Lake, Jasper National Park, they returned with a nice mess of trout.

VACATION HINTS

Life is made up of periods of work and recreation. The summer vacation should provide recreation. An essential point in recreation is that it gives leisure and satisfaction. It is because what pleases one does not please another that there are great differences in type of vacations. A vacation should provide a complete change and a break from the ordinary routine of life. The indoor worker should have plenty of outdoor exercise together with relief from his usual mental activities. The manual worker wants rest and relaxation. The man of business had better not see the home papers or be near a telephone.

The vacation should be safe as well as pleasant. It is a poor return on a vacation to contract some illness and so it is well worth while to consider the safety of the vacation along with the other points.

Despite a popular idea, one does not gain health by simply going to the country or to a summer resort. Disease is more prevalent in the country than in the city; water supplies become contaminated in rural areas and raw milk on the farm is not safe dishes need to be sterilized at summer hotels just as much as at a city restaurant. We suggest the advisability of enquiring as to the safety of the water and milk supplies and for other information as to what the opinion of safety is based upon. You cannot judge the safety of water by its appearance. A clear cold water may be laden with typhoid germs whereas the muddy stream may be free from pollution. Unless a supply of pasteurized milk is available, boil the milk you have and be sure that your children do not use anything but pasteurized or boiled milk.

Water and milk are either safe or they are dangerous. If they are safe, use them freely; if not, do not fool yourself in thinking that just a little will do no harm. That one sip may be sufficient to cause a great deal of harm.

Sunshine is good but it is to be taken in moderation beginning with small doses. Sunburn is a burn and is just as uncomfortable and harmful as if the burn were acquired in any other way. Secure a coat of tan but go at it slowly.

Each summer a number of deaths from drowning occur. Most of these would have been avoided by paying attention to a few safeguards. Never swim alone. Never swim in a place where you do not know the depths and the current. Stay out of the water for two hours after meals.

You can make your vacation safe and comfortable as well as pleasant by attention to these simple matters.

FOR WEEK-END GUESTS

Women guests are usually "tired of their own cooking" and in the mood to doubly appreciate an unusual dainty. The men are always interested in tasteful novelties. Here are two recipes for vegetable dishes—where sugar is used to blend the other seasonings, bring out the flavor of the vegetables and furnish quick energy as well.

Glazed Carrots

These glazed carrots go particularly well with the hot roast lamb and may be cooked in the oven at the same time, thus conserving fuel. Cook six large carrots for fifteen minutes in boiling salted water. Remove the skins. Cut into slices. Place in a baking pan. Make a syrup with one-half cup brown sugar, one-fourth cup butter and one-fourth cup hot water. Pour over the carrots and bake until brown. Baste occasionally.

Creamed Turnips

Small yellow or white turnips may be used for this recipe. It will appeal to the hostess because it is as easy to prepare as it is good to eat.

Boil six large turnips until done. Add one cup sweet milk, one-half cup butter, salt and pepper, and one teaspoon sugar. Mash with a potato masher until smooth. Serve very hot

MIX TWO AND GET THREE

A man "bun" between walked into a candy store with a flock of kids. He asked the clerk for a cent's worth of candy. When asked what kind he wanted he replied "mix 'em up." Is a country where it is hard to get enough cheap pasture on way out is to mix 'em up.

Five blue pigs are up again. They are searching for great pastures. Their owners are writing to the Experimental Farm at Scott asking how to get it.

Here is a simple recipe: Mix together equal parts of oats and fall rye. Place in drill set at three bushels for oats. If moisture is plentiful, increase the rate. Seed in spring in early summer on land ready for the job. Pasture with discretion in summer, fall and the next spring.

This is how it works. Oats provide green feed during the hars weather, rye merely starts and establishes its root system during the summer, and as cooler weather comes it shoots forth a denser growth for fall feeding. Next spring it starts again to provide a third series of meals for the pigs. Fall rye used in this way beats out ergot.

It also pays with hog pasture to rotate the fields. Small, permanent pastures encourage parasites in hogs. When the fall rye is finished, summer-fallow the field and turn the hogs into another place where similar pasture is just starting. Those who try it will find the pigs will tell the rest of the story how two grains provide three pastures.

To make an efficient polishing cloth, dissolve 1 oz. of oxalic acid (poison) in 1 gal. of water. When the solution is complete, sift in 1 lb. of ordinary whitening and mix with a stick. Sort pieces of cloth, such as flannel, when saturated with this mixture, gently squeezed out and

What Shall We Name the Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY

CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each baby that comes into the world is, indeed, an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

The problem of naming a baby presents a symphony of a very momentous question. As in J. Not only does my own name the father of five children, however, fit in with the scheme, but Mrs. I think I can best answer it by giving Davis's also, with the given name of ing you the names of those of my Jean. So of course, there are two family. They are James, Jane, Jean, juniors in the family. Joan and Jewel.

No. 14—JAMES J. DAVIS

SECRETARY OF LABOR

JAMES is a name of Hebrew origin, meaning "supplanter." It is a variant of Jacob. King James I of England (and VI of Scotland) was called "The Wisest Fool in Christendom." The only other English King of that name, James I, was banished, the last of the Stuarts.

answered Brick.
"And that just bears out what I told you long before this," grumbled Tiger Kluge. "You ought to have told Eddie what the game really was in the first place."

"Not a chance," scoffed Brick. "Eddie's a queer duck. He will play right along on the jewel-robbery idea but he would cut cold at the bare mention of kidnapping. If he even has a hunch of the truth—that I'm aiming to kidnap the heiress to the Aam worthy millions and hold her for ransom—he would quit without notice. That's one kind of stuff he wouldn't be in on."

"He's a sap," murmured Tiger Kluge.
"I'll say he's almost a gentleman," corrected Brick Taggart. "He's got a lot of what you'd call sporting notions in that good-looking skull of his. And for all the knocking around he's done, he has a batch of goofy ideas about women being the weaker sex and not being fair game for the likes of us."

"If he's as bad as that," remarked Tiger, "maybe he'd be just fool enough to spill the beans once he hears up that you've stolen Miss Julia Ainsworthy and are asking plenty of jack for her safe return."

"Not a chance," Brick Taggart assured Tiger Kluge. "Once we get the girl and stow her away, he won't dare open his mouth. The finest ideals in the world quit working if a fellow knows he's going to stir for twenty to thirty years."

"Thirty years," gasped Tiger. "You mean to say they really give you a stretch like that for kidnapping?"

"They do," said Taggart. "But they have to catch you at it, first. And if you and Runt McKay follow my orders when the time comes, no one is going to get caught."

"Yeah, but thirty years—"
"And why not?" demanded Taggart. "It's the old story, Tiger—the game and the candle. The bigger the stakes, the tougher the punishment. Don't forget that you and Runt are due for a clean twenty-five per cent if this works. And when the ransom is paid, it's going to be at least one hundred and fifty grand."

Tiger Kluge ceased fidgeting then, and, with a furtive animal reaction his tongue licked across his thin lips in hungry anticipation. "Twenty-five per cent on a hundred and fifty grand," he gasped. "Why, me and Runt will be rich. I didn't have any idea you would try for important dough like that."

"I'll not only try, I'll get it," bragged Taggart. "No fencing. No chances. All honest cash."

"Huh!" sighed Tiger Kluge. "Fudged like that, I'd take a chance on life imprisonment. Will I jump to it when Eddie Britton tells you that Miss Julia Ainsworthy is where me and Runt can lay our mitts on her?"

"Which ought to be pretty soon," added Taggart. "And if she only comes back before the mob of help she let go on vacation, it'll be a snap to catch. Any day now, and we may have action."

A week passed at Gray Gate Farm and, in its passing, queer things had happened in the heart of Eddie Britton. Queer how the girl Anita had conquered him! He would go up to the kitchen of the big house to eat with her the meals she had prepared. He remembered with the instinctive dread of all foredoomed bachelors the old saying about the way to a man's heart being easiest to a girl who could cook a good meal.

True, there was nothing fancy about her cooking, but it surely did knock the stuffing out of the restaurant and boarding-house grub which had been his lot for years. "You're wasting your time being a lady's maid Nita," he had told her several times. Always she had laughed at that, but the laughter had rung pleasantly in his ear. His girl, Nita, liked a compliment as well as the next one.

There was more to their growing friendship than just meals and meal times. In the evening, they would sit out on the big lawns watching the glittering sky, listening to the last, lingering whispers of springtime in the trees, and talking in the hushed voices of youth in love.

When that first week passed, she met him in the morning with the announcement that Miss Julia had communicated with all the other servants and told them to take another week. "She phoned me last night after you went back to the garage. Told me I could take time off, too, but I said I would just as soon stay here. You see," she paused, and her tinkling laughter thrilled him—it's so much fun to be here like this. I can just pretend that all this property is mine and that you're—you're—you're my handy man."

He did it then—did the thing that he had thought he would do some night under a starry sky. At the touch of his hands and the caress of his lips she was still for one brief instant. Then she wrenched herself away and ran toward the kitchen (Continued Next Week)

DO YOUR CUCUMBERS SET?

Persons starting to grow cucumbers often complain that very few set on the vines and if they attempt to form, often fall off. The main reason for this is improper fertilization.

The flowers of the cucumber plant are imperfect. They are either male or female flowers but both are found on the same plant. Under prairie conditions there are often not enough suitable active insects to fertilize the female flowers and thus set the cucumbers.

Cucumber flowers are found where the leaves join the stem, but are distinguishable as to sex. Without describing the differences in parts of the flower, they can be readily recognized by the shape of the stem between the flower and the vine. In the male flower this stem is long and narrow, but in the female this so-called stem is the shape of a very young cucumber, which it really is.

With the presence of numerous honey bees at the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, artificial polination is not necessary, but where this is a problem it can be remedied in the following manner.

When the pollen of the male flower is yellow this work should be done. Pick off a male bloom, remove the petals, insert the remaining part of the male flower containing the pollen into the female flower and the cucumbers will automatically set fruit.

CANADA TAKES CREDIT

A Canadian editor attempted to compile some of the contributions to world progress made by his fellow citizens, and found that the list was by no means a short one.

The first long distance trials of the telephone were made in Canada where the idea of this instrument actually originated.

The idea of standard time which is now used in every civilized country also originated in Canada. The first compound steam engine which doomed the sailing ship was built and demonstrated in Canada, as was the first submarine telegraph and the first electric stove.

The idea of making paper from pulp wood, and building an all-electric radio came from this country. The first steamboat sent across the Atlantic, and the first railway sleeping cars were also Canadian products.

As a contribution to American citizenship Canada presented several hundred thousand of her sons and daughters to her southern neighbor. Perhaps it would be better to say that these sons and daughters presented themselves. At any rate, such citizens as Admiral Sims, Wilson of packing house fame, Cousins of Detroit and Mary Pickford of Filmland are welcomed in any country.

COOK BOOK AVAILABLE IN ENGLISH, FRENCH

Copies of the new book, "Fish and How to Cook It," which has been issued by the Dominion Department of Fisheries, are now available either in French or English at a price of ten cents each. The booklet has been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Evelyn Spencer, specialist in fish cookery, who is now on the department's staff. It gives authoritative information and is designed to meet the needs of the average Canadian household. Persons wishing to receive the booklet should write the Deputy Minister of Fisheries, Ottawa, enclosing ten cents for each copy required and stating whether the English edition or the French edition is desired.

Too Much ACID

MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion—as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 50c a bottle—any drug store.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia tooth-paste.

The record of Canada is like the course of a mighty river—interrupted at times by twists and turns of difficulty, but making across the map of the last 60 years a line of progress so strong and sure that its direction is unmistakable.

The Royal Bank of Canada is typical of this progress. Starting as a small local bank in Halifax, it has moved steadily forward through booms and depressions since 1869. With 881 branch offices, it is today one of the great banking institutions of the world.
